Looking for job or even a campus club to help make yourself at home? The University of Wisconsin-Superior’s ‘Jacket Fest took place Thursday, Sept. 21, connecting students to opportunities to explore and engage with other students. Students also had the chance to find a job nearby as businesses were looking to hire.

Students could visit booths that display different clubs, job opportunities, and more. Each organization provided a display for people to interact and learn more about on campus activities or jobs willing to hire students.

One popular organization that was represented at ‘Jacket Fest was Campus Recreation. Campus Rec offers students the option to stay active and participate in intramural sports, Superior adventures, and sport clubs.

Felicity Hohndorf, a representative at the campus rec booth said, “We try our best to get students involved. Campus rec offers lots of free opportunities to get students moving and to stay healthy.” The booth was successful, as they were able to get fifteen people to sign up.

But it’s not the only about the physical activity. The social aspect of Campus Rec also creates lifelong friendships. Hohndorf said, “I actually met two of my roommates through campus rec.” Students also were able to connect with peers who have similar long-term goals.

Another booth that was displayed was the Future Teachers Association (FTA). In this association, students can learn more about the education field through volunteering and partnership with other nearby schools.

Brenna Mattson, a future teacher, was present at the booth. “Being part of this association allows students with same career path to interact and meet. I have made new friends and connections within the association,” said Mattson.

Overall, the UWS courtyard was filled with students looking for new ways to involve themselves on and off-campus. Other booths were filled with games, snacks, and even merchandise to help attract students.

If you missed ‘Jacket Fest this year, all student clubs and organizations are available to join and find through JacketHub. If you were interested in finding a job at ‘Jacket Fest, you can always visit career services on the first floor of Swenson Hall. UWS students can also get find jobs that suit them online on Handshake or LinkedIn.

“She Kills Monsters” is currently under production with the university’s theatre program. Play’s Director Saun Naughton brought Rick Sorderolet to choreograph the fight scenes. Above is the miniture of what the Manion Theatre is expected to look like on the play’s opening night.

EDITOR’S NOTE: The Promethean’s Athletes of the Issue selects from the Yellowjacket Athletics Players of the Week chosen before are issue date. The Promethean staff then narrows it down to one men’s and women’s athlete through a staff vote.

Jake Kidd: Selected as UWS’s athlete of the week on Oct. 3. In a game against Northland Kidd got a hat trick in a 6-2 win on the road. He followed that up with another goal at home Saturday as the Yellowjackets routed Martin Luther 7-0. Kidd also leads the team in goals, recording seven on the year.

Kaylin Plautz: Earning two Yellowjacket Athlete of the Week honors with the first coming on Sept. 12, a few days after being named to the Stinger Classic All-Tournament team tallying 47 kills and 16 blocks as UWS went undefeated in the tournament. Two weeks later she helped the Yellowjackets win three straight with 44 kills
