Student Government Association Briefs

Sustainability at UW-Superior

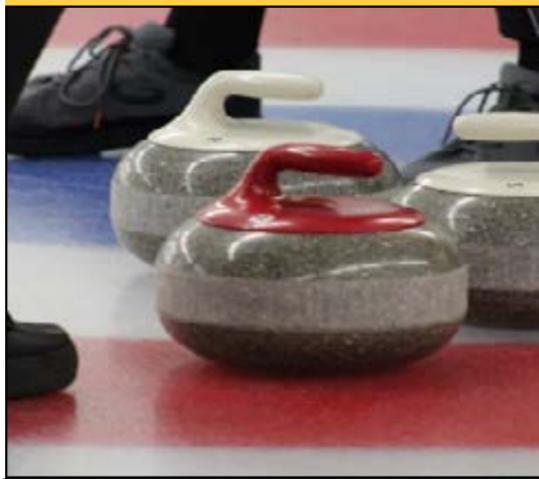

SGA member Usman Ahmad met the president of UW-Eau Claire at a shared governance meeting. SGA will be working with them to bring sustainable practices to UWS.

Fall Finals Week

The Jim Dan Hill Library will be extending their hours for finals week—they will be open until midnight Dec. 16 and 17.

About the SGA: Student Government Association, or SGA, is dedicated to supporting and advocating for students. SGA has many roles on campus. SGA creates and implements projects for the betterment of the student body, and they represent UW-Superior students at other UW-System shared governance platforms. SGA also mediates student affairs, allocates funds to student clubs, and manages misconduct within those clubs. SGA seeks to cultivate a welcoming environment on campus, promote student involvement, and train students for leadership.

Curling to be Offered as a Club in the Spring 2025 Semester

Hold on, folks, it's time to curl. The University of Wisconsin-Superior has plenty of different clubs the student body can choose from, but one club is making its return next semester.

The UWS Curling Club is officially coming back during the Spring 2025 semester. After previous Curling Club members graduated from UWS, Gift Uchegbu, an international freshman, wants to see the club make its return. "It's a club that was existing before, but the players have graduated, and there was no one to continue with the club. However, I am very much interested in curling, and I got an opportunity to play in the junior curling B championship in Finland in December 2022," said Uchegbu.

Since the club is still starting up, there is no club president yet; Uchegbu is the only member right now. "I can't exactly say that I am the president because we haven't had our club meeting and all. The course advisor and I went to the Superior Curling Club to make inquiries about membership. I paused the opening for a while because students are already embedded in classes, and it's almost examination period," said Uchegbu.

The main goal for the start of next semester is to start recruiting members when more people are free. "We haven't started practicing yet. I'm still trying to get more members to join the club. I also plan to table beginning of next semester where students are free and have more time to include the sport in their schedule," said Uchegbu.

Experience with the sport or on ice isn't needed, all you need to do is show up with a smile and a willingness to have fun. If interested in joining UWS Curling next semester, you can reach out to the club on Jacket's Connect at the start of the Spring 2025 semester, email Uchegbu at cuchegbu@uwsuper.edu or the club's advisor, Caitlin Dailey, at cdailey@uwsuper.edu.

Alumni & Friends Foundation Hosts "Jacket Jingle" Party to Celebrate December Grads

Graduating this semester? Congratulations! Did you know that the Alumni & Friends Foundation put on a party to celebrate fall graduates? Coined the "Jacket Jingle" after its holiday theme, the party was held at the Belknap Lounge on Dec. 5 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Attendees could participate in festive games, a scavenger hunt, and giveaways, as well as enjoying free food and drinks. Heather Thompson, the Director of Alumni Relations for the Alumni & Friends Foundation, said that the party is a great way for new graduates to get introduced to alumni events.

The Jacket Jingle isn't the only party for new grads. GOLD Rush is the spring equivalent to the Jacket Jingle. The time and location isn't always the same, so be sure to check the campus calendar for more information.

In addition to celebrating new graduates, the Alumni & Friends Foundation puts on events throughout the year. One of the upcoming events is going to a Madison Capitols hockey game in Middleton, Wis. Thompson said that the Foundation plans events local to UW-Superior, as well as other areas where there are pockets of UWS alum. The Foundation hosts a variety of events from arts and crafts to sporting events, making it a good resource for alumni to stay in contact with UWS while doing something fun.

For more information on Alumni & Friends events, check out their webpage on the UWS website, or the campus calendar.
